

Insurance group donates $10,000

Published: Tuesday, August 07, 2007

WARRENSBURG * The Cool Insuring Agency Inc. on Tuesday presented the Hudson Headwaters Health Network with a $10,000 donation.

The contribution will support the network's efforts to improve the quality of care for patients.

"We are honored that Cool Insuring has recognized the importance of the primary care that the Network provides to the North Country," said Hudson Headwaters CEO John Rugge, M.D. "Health care is facing challenges across the country and especially in rural areas such as the region the Network serves. We're fortunate indeed to have friends like Cool Insuring that find ways to help. We salute this fine company on its 150th anniversary and offer our gratitude for their donation."

Hudson Headwaters Health Network is one of 15 organizations to receive donations as part of Cool Insuring Agency's 150th Anniversary Celebration.

Cool Insuring Agency is contributing a total of $150,000 to charitable organizations in the communities it serves throughout New York State's Warren, Albany and Broome counties.

"Cool saw the 150th anniversary as a good opportunity to give back to the communities that have helped it become one of the oldest and largest insurance agencies in the nation," said Tony Mashuta, president of Cool Insuring Agency.

Hudson Headwaters Health Network is a system of community health centers providing care to the residents and visitors of the Adirondack/Lake George/Glens Falls area in upstate New York.

More than 60,000 people receive care annually at 12 health centers covering 3,700 square-miles in four different counties.